

COMM 6320 : Fiction Production

This course provides an intensive , hands-on experience in fiction media production, including logistics, research, planning, project-management, and delivery/exhibition. Working in teams, students conceptualize, develop, and implement a fiction film, video, or digital media project over the course of the semester. All students will receive training in core aspects of the fiction production process, but the course will culminate in a team project with students filling specific crew roles based on prior coursework and individual experience – screenwriting, producing, directing, cinematography, production sound, and editing.
